

Free wildlife webinar series

THE HUMANE SOCIETY
OF THE UNITED STATES

Join us for free webinars on wildlife conflict resolution!

Does your agency or organization receive calls about wildlife? If so, join us for a series of free webinars full of information to help you respond to the public's wildlife concerns! We will discuss how to handle calls about orphaned and injured wildlife, how to address "nuisance" issues with wildlife in and around the home, and how to help the public solve wildlife conflicts by addressing their root causes. We'll also share tips for solving wildlife conflict calls over the phone (rather than dispatching on officer) and helpful resources for both animal care and control professionals and the public.

Wildlife in our neighborhoods—Dec. 12 at 1 p.m. EST

Did you know that many species of wildlife thrive in urban areas? This sometimes brings animals into conflict with people. Covering the gamut of wildlife from raccoons to bats and birds, the first webinar in our series provides an overview of wildlife in urbanized areas, including discussion of their relevant natural history and information on how these different species operate in cities and towns using the food and shelter people knowingly and unknowingly provide. Using examples and video from our experiences in the field, you will get the basic information and a framework for addressing conflicts humanely and effectively.
